You don't have to order and pay per standard, but you can view and download as many standards as you want within your subscription form.

Ready-made package

Standard packages are available for certain sectors. These packages have been compiled by experts and contain the most important standards. You can choose from more than 75 packages, for example electrical engineering packages or fire protection packages.

Create your own package

In the case of a custom-made collection, we agree on the number of standards in advance. You can then put together your own collection with the standards of your choice when you need them. You can change 10% of your standards free of charge per year.

FREE ACCESS TO FREELY AVAILABLE STANDARDS

A free account gives you unlimited access to a selection of European Directives, the Publication Series on Hazardous Substances and the NEN standards made available to you. After registration, you can view and download the standards, also via the NEN Connect app.

USEFUL FEATURES OF NEN CONNECT

You want to manage and use standards as efficiently as possible. That's why NEN Connect has a number of useful features to help you do this. Below you will find a selection.

Create your personal favourites

Are there any documents that you use frequently or that are important to you? You can mark these documents as your personal favourites. This allows you to find them quickly and easily, also in the app.

Compare two versions of standards quickly and easily

The NEN Connect Redline module allows you to compare the current version of a standard with the previous one. This allows you to see quickly and easily what has been modified and whether this is relevant to your organization.

Clustering standards into a subcollection

Compile the standards you need for a project or process and give specific employees access. This guarantees that every employee involved in a particular project has access to the right standards.

Insight into use

The reports allow business managers to view the use of NEN Connect within your organization. How many employees have logged in, how many standards have been requested and/or downloaded? With this information you can create the optimal collection in NEN Connect in no time at all. You can create reports about each period and thus uncover trends.

Add your own business documents

You often have dozens or even hundreds of business documents within your organization, such as process descriptions and work protocols, which are regularly changed or supplemented. With NEN Connect, you can add and manage your own business documents. The added business documents are then included in all searches as standard. This ensures that you and your colleagues always have access to all relevant documents for each project.

WHO CAN DO WHAT IN NEN CONNECT?

NEN Connect has three types of users who each have certain rights: administrator, expert and user.

- Administrator

The administrator of your company account has full control over the compilation and settings of your standards collection and who is allowed to use them. Users can only request standards. As an administrator, you decide whether a standard is added and to which collection.

- Expert

An expert is almost the same as a user linked to a company account. But as an expert you can also create, compose and manage subcollections, and you can add comments to standards that all your colleagues can read.

- User

A user has access to all information on the standards from the core range and to the freely available standards. If you are linked to a company, you can also view your company's standards and request standards that are not yet in the collections.

Easy for everyone

- All versions of the standard are readily available
- Accessible and easy to manage from anywhere
- Automatic update on changes
- Current and historic version of a standard
